George Pleads Not Guilty in Iran-Contra Case

By George Lardner Jr.
Washington Post Staff Writer

Clair E. George, former chief of covert operations at the CIA, pleaded not guilty in federal court yesterday to charges that he made false statements, perjured himself and obstructed congressional and grand jury probes of the Iran-contra affair.

George, 61, submitted the plea in a loud, firm voice before U.S. District Judge Royce C. Lamberth and was released on his own recognizance.

The judge gave George's lawyer, Richard A. Hibey, until Oct. 3 to meet with Iran-contra prosecutors and get a sense of the extent of the classified records they will need. Even though George was head of the CIA's clandestine service in the mid-1980s, Hibey said "my client is possessed of no documents with respects to the issues in this case."

George was indicted Sept. 6 on 10 felony counts accusing him of giving false testimony to three congressional committees that investigated early aspects of the scandal in the fall of 1986 and of lying again to a federal grand jury last April about his role in preparing testimony for one of the committees.

Lamberth was assigned to preside at the request of prosecutors for independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh who said the case's complexities and length could rival those in the cases against former White House aide Oliver L. North and former national security adviser John M. Poindexter.

North's case was in progress downstairs on an extraordinary remand proceeding before U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell to determine whether televised testimony North gave Congress in 1987 under a grant of immunity from prosecution was used against him at his trial 20 months later.

The first witness, former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane, said Wednesday that his trial testimony had been "colored" by watching North's widely televised performance. McFarlane returned to the witness stand yesterday to describe how closely he followed North's testimony, watching for hours each day with his lawyers, taking notes, clipping every news story about it from The Washington Post and the New York Times until, he said, it became a part of his memory.

McFarlane also told North lawyer Brendan V. Sullivan that he learned "new information" from listening to North. That appeared to conflict with McFarlane's repeated statements Wednesday that there were no identifiable facts he learned for the first time from North's testimony.

A federal appeals court ordered North's 1989 felony convictions set aside until the review is completed. Gesell expressed exasperation at the mandate, saying it was loaded with verbs and adjectives "that wander all over the place," telling him to review testimony that might have been "affected" or "motivated" by what North said. Gesell predicted that his decision would end up in the appeals court, no matter how he rules.
